Dear Harold

Enclosed is a copy of a letter to Dick Sprague.

You don't know C's real role, or his many motives as I do. If it were possible for me to talk to you in person you would know some of the pressures I face in regards to C.

C has had your address since December 1970. He still has my "Whitewash Series" you wrote too. Its his game now. He has seen your letters - all of them. (I showed him the last)

You have every reason to write what you do about my mistakes. C knows, and can help me to regain trust between you and I, but he wouldn't do it. I'll keep his god-damned secrets too.

Some where on some level of existance there must be a easier way to state objective truths. than this.

Thank you again
and I will write again
Jim
